

The Responsible Aquaculture Foundation (RAF) Education Program provides a platform from which to disseminate knowledge on best management practices for aquaculture. It will also attempt to address issues related to disease and other production problems as they develop.

Working in conjunction with leading experts in the fields of aquaculture and distance education, RAF is placing the focus of its initial courses on health management for shrimp facilities and seafood safety.